Aims of the research

- To review the existing research and literature
- To explore and identify the experiences and impacts faced by families left behind by missing people
- To explore how different missing scenarios produce different impacts for families
- To highlight immediate gaps in service provision
- To identify areas for policy development

Research methods

- Interviews were conducted with 22 adults from 20 families of currently missing adults
- 17 women and 5 men were interviewed; 5 mothers, 2 fathers, 9 siblings (or siblings-in-law) and 6 sons or daughters of missing people.
- The missing family members were: 9 women and 11 men; 2 teenagers, 8 aged 20-39, 7 aged 40-60 and 3 aged 60 or more.
- 3 of the missing people had been gone for less than 1 year, 7 had been missing for 1-3 years, 6 had been missing for 4-10 years, and 4 had been missing for 10+ years.
