1 Policy statement

Missing People is committed to the principle and practice of safeguarding. It is the responsibility of all employees and volunteers at Missing People to play a key role in safeguarding all children, young people and vulnerable adults with whom we come into contact.

Missing People's vision is that every missing person is found safe. We offer a lifeline to the 250,000 people who run away and go missing each year. For those left behind, we search and provide specialised support to end the heartache and confusion. It is through these services that we aim to safeguard and protect children and adults.

We recognise that being able to recognise risk to children and vulnerable adults effectively and take appropriate action is a vital part of the work we do as an organisation.

Missing People offers a pledge of confidentiality to the users of our services (Reference 1: Confidentiality Policy). Confidentiality is the foundation on which our services are built, as it allows people to trust us. It is only through building a relationship of trust that we are able to help someone to stay safe. However, the safety and welfare of the individual is of prime importance, which means that Missing People will consider disclosing information about a service user without their agreement, where there is sufficient reason to believe

- that they are at significant risk of serious harm, or
- that their life, or someone else's life, is in danger.

Missing People recognises the significant and vital role that it plays in protecting children and vulnerable adults from harm and promoting their wellbeing. We believe that all children and adults have the right to live without fear, abuse, harm, exploitation or intimidation. The organisation is committed to safeguarding all children and vulnerable adults, irrespective of ability, ethnicity, faith, gender, sexuality or culture.

The impact of abuse and neglect of any child or young person, either physically, emotionally or sexually, can have a major long-term effect on all aspects of their health, development and well-being. Everyone involved in working with children has a duty to:

- Prevent abuse and neglect
- Identify those children at risk
- Promote children's welfare, health and development
- Act to prevent them from harm

Similarly, adult safeguarding aims to stop abuse or neglect wherever possible, and to support adults to make choices and have control about how they want to live.

2 Principles and context

2.1 Principles

Missing People's Safeguarding Children and Vulnerable Adults Policy is based on the following principles:

Grounded in the needs of missing people and their families and our knowledge of the vulnerabilities that they face.

True to the ethos of our services. We offer confidentiality in order to build a relationship of trust, and aim to empower our service users through a caller-led, non-directive approach. We respect a person's right to be missing and we work with them to keep them safe. We have a culture of listening to children and vulnerable adults and taking account of their wishes and feelings, both in individual decisions and the development of services.

Strategic – the Policy will help Missing People achieve our strategic aim to safeguard and support missing people. We help to find vulnerable missing people and we provide help and support to children and vulnerable adults who contact us.

Appropriate to our service – we offer services that can be accessed anonymously, and services where people are referred by other agencies or self-refer, and we recognise the need to manage our relationships with users of our different services differently with regard to safeguarding.

We operate in the following ways, in order to deliver effective safeguarding:

- Oversight – we have clear roles and responsibilities for safeguarding at every level of the organisation.
- Support – staff and volunteers are given training and supervision appropriate to their role, and are able to access the On Call Manager 24 hours a day.
- Accountability – staff and volunteers keep records of all work with vulnerable people and any concerns about safeguarding or decisions made.
- Internal information sharing – we understand that a child or vulnerable adult may share different pieces of risk information with different people within the organisation and we ensure that we are able to “join up the dots”.
- Multi-agency working – we recognise that as an organisation we are not able to keep people safe on our own, and we share relevant information with statutory agencies when needed.
- Best practice – we are compliant with good practice frameworks relating to safeguarding, and as an organisation we ensure that we keep our knowledge current.
- Scrutiny – with the help of our Safeguarding Panel of experts, we monitor the effectiveness of our Safeguarding Policy and Procedures and act on any learning.
- Safer recruitment – we carry out relevant checks before allowing staff and volunteers to work regularly with children.

Whistleblowing – we have clear whistleblowing procedures for staff and volunteers and we foster a culture where everyone feels free to speak up about any concerns.

Responsibility - we have clear policies for dealing with allegations against staff or volunteers who work with children, including the disclosing of allegations with the relevant authorities.

2.2 Context

2.2.1 UN Convention on Rights of the Child

Our philosophy and approach to safeguarding children are grounded in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, and support Article 34 – the right to protection from sexual abuse; Article 39 – the right to special help for children who have been abused; Article 16 – the right to privacy, and Article 12 – the right to be involved in decisions that affect them.

A child's basic rights include:

- Protection against all forms of discrimination and punishment

- Survival and development
- Protection from abuse and neglect
- Education, housing, healthcare, and all forms of mental and physical well-being

We also believe that “Every child has the right to a voice on matters that affect them and to have their views taken seriously – in accordance with their age and maturity. (UNICEF, 2009)”

2.2.2 Working Together to Safeguard Children (2018)

Working Together to Safeguard Children - A guide to inter-agency working to safeguard and promote the welfare of children promotes a child-centred approach to safeguarding where safeguarding is everyone’s responsibility, and everyone who works with children has a responsibility for keeping them safe.

Working Together to Safeguard Children states that voluntary organisations should have appropriate arrangements in place to safeguard and protect children from harm. Charity trustees are responsible for ensuring that those benefiting from, or working with, their charity, are not harmed in any way through contact with it.

2.2.3 Care Act 2014 – statutory guidance for implementation

The Care Act guidance states that in any organisation, there should be adult safeguarding policies and procedures. It sets out the aims of adult safeguarding and promotes six key principles to underpin all adults safeguarding work: empowerment, prevention, proportionality, protection, partnership, and accountability.

3 Definitions

3.1 Children and Young People

Missing People recognises a child as a person under 18 years of age.

3.2 Vulnerable Adults

Missing People recognises a *vulnerable adult*¹ as an adult who

- has needs for care and support (whether or not the local authority is meeting any of those needs), and
- is experiencing, or at risk of, abuse or neglect, and
- as a result of those care and support needs is unable to protect themselves from either abuse or neglect

A person’s vulnerability may be permanent and temporary and this may include people with mental health problems, people with suicidal feelings or ideation, people who misuse drugs or alcohol, people who have been exploited and/or trafficked, people who have been radicalised, and victims of forced marriage.

At Missing People, we consider that a person’s status as missing, or having a loved one missing, can make them vulnerable or increase their vulnerability to harm or exploitation.

3.3 Abuse

The abuse and neglect of children are forms of maltreatment – a person may abuse or neglect a child by inflicting harm, or by failing to act to prevent harm. There are four main categories of child abuse and neglect: physical abuse, emotional abuse, sexual abuse and neglect.

Abuse is a violation of an individual's human and civil rights by any other person or persons. Abuse may consist of a single act or repeated acts. Abuse can occur in any relationship and may result in significant harm to, or exploitation of, the person subjected to it.

Categories of abuse and neglect of adults include:²

- Physical abuse
- Domestic violence
- Sexual abuse
- Psychological abuse
- Financial or material abuse
- Modern slavery
- Discriminatory abuse
- Organisational abuse
- Neglect and acts of omission
- Self-neglect

3.4 Safeguarding and significant harm

Safeguarding involves

- the action we take to promote the welfare of children and protect them from harm
- the protection of those adults who, without support to be able to challenge and change harmful or abusive situations, become vulnerable, and at risk of harm/abuse.

Significant harm is “the threshold that justifies compulsory intervention in family life in the best interests of the child”, as defined in the Children Act 1989. The local authority will determine whether the harm or likely harm suffered by the child is significant by comparing the child's health or development with that which could reasonably be expected of a similar child. Significant harm is ill treatment or impairment of health or development, and it can be as a result of witnessing the ill-treatment of another person.

Significant harm is the threshold for a child protection investigation, whereas safeguarding is early intervention.

6 Ensuring Effectiveness

Missing People makes sure that its staff, volunteers and trustees understand the Safeguarding Policy.

Safeguarding training and annual refresher training are provided to all staff and volunteers who come into contact with vulnerable people.
